Cummins Indianapolis Global Distribution Headquarters about to open.

With construction manager Wilhelm Construction at the helm of the project, Barth Electric is nearing the completion of the Cummins Global Distribution Headquarters in downtown Indianapolis. The ten story office building includes an architecturally interesting parking garage, retail on the first level, a flexible learning center and significant green space on the southwest corner of the property. The new Headquarters is situated on a four acre plot, bordered by the Cultural Trail, at the former site of Market Square Arena. Visitors will notice the unique architecture that is a trademark look of all Cummins buildings. Cummins is a well-established Fortune 500 company, founded over 95 years ago in Columbus, Indiana by the Irwin family. The Distribution Business is one of the Company's four business units, selling the full range of Cummins products for more than 20 application segments in more than 190 countries. The Barth team is led by Project Manager Van Bragg and Foreman Jason Koehler. The Wilhelm team is represented by Jeremy Ayers, Operations Manager, and Cummins is represented by Miranda Fox. The building was designed by architect Deborah Berke, based in New York. The building is to be completed in late October for full occupancy in December of this year.

Circle City Industrial Complex helps set Future of Mass Ave. Redevelopment

Barth Electric is working on multiple projects within the Circle City Industrial Complex, located at 1125 Brookside Ave in Indianapolis. The building spans several city blocks and half a million square feet. We have just completed the install of seven new services ranging in size from 400 amps to 2000 amps. Originally constructed in the early 1920's, the structure currently houses over 50 tenants, including an ice cream shop, art studios, metal fabrication shops, a craft beer brewery, and more. Louis Schwitzer, the builder, was also an engineer and auto racing royalty, winning the first race ever held at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway – a five mile, two lap event held on August 19, 1909.

Redevelopment of the building is being led by Teagen Development, the owner of the property, and Larry Jones, Teagen's President. Other strategic partners include Riley Area Development Corporation (led by Eric Strickland), Pattern (a not-for-profit volunteer organization), and People for Urban Progress (PUP). The building redevelopment is part of the Mass Ave redevelopment plan and is within 500 feet of both the Cultural Trail and the Monon rail. Barth Electric Company's project manager for this job is Josh Andrews.

Irsay Family YMCA at Cityway was opened In December of last year.

Construction of The Irsay Family YMCA at Cityway was complete in October 2015, and the facility opened that December. A collaboration between the Franciscan Health Network, Eli Lilly, Buckingham and the YMCA, this is the largest YMCA built in the both the state and the city. Situated just a few hundred yards from the Lilly complex, four blocks from Lucas Oil Stadium, and just steps from Bankers Life Field house, this 79,000 square foot state of the art fitness complex is the flagship of the YMCAs of Indianapolis. Amenities include over 100 pieces of aerobic equipment, 50 pieces of strength training equipment, a 25-bike studio, two aerobic studios, a yoga studio with bamboo flooring, a four-lane 25 yard lap pool, a 7,600 square foot exercise pool, and three full sized basketball gymnasiums. A 10 lap to a mile elevated track offers views of the entire city. Hoagland's Restaurant is located on the first floor, and the Instructional Teaching Kitchen/ Demo Studio offers classes to brush up on cooking skills.

Barth Electric was involved with this project for over five years, from preliminary budgeting to final construction. Dennis Sheet, VP, led the project for Barth Electric. The Construction Management Company was Shiel Sexton, led by Frank Duck, and the YMCA was represented by Greg Hiland, COO and Eric Ellsworth, CEO of the YMCAs of Greater Indianapolis.
